HALE BROS. & CO.

A Great Tidal Wave

That has affected the financial interests of the whole community.

IRRESISTIBLE!

Carrying everything before it!
Sweeping not only our city,
but the entire valley.

DEVASTATING

Only to our competitors, who ineffectually have tried to stem the current!

HALE BROS. & CO.

Congratulate the thousands who, during the past four days, have thronged their stores, and taken advantage of the

BARGAINS TO BE HAD

—AT THEIR—

Great Clearance Sale

We promised the public a benefit during this Great Sale, and we are gratified to see such a manifestation of public confidence in our advertisements. To those who may not yet have visited our

ANNUAL DEPLETION SALE,

We urge you to come. If merely out of curiosity come, and satisfy yourselves as to the reduction in prices that have been made all over our House for the special purpose of closing out our stock of Fall & Winter Goods!

—IN OUR—

Dress Goods Department,
Domestic Department,
Fancy Goods Department,
Boot and Shoe Department,
Men's Clothing Department,
Furnishing Goods Department.

NO DEPARTMENT HAS ESCAPED;

IT IS A VERITABLE SLAUGHTER!

With the determination to effect a thorough clearance, we have cut the prices down to figures that must induce any and everybody to buy. The immensity and superiority of our stock you are mostly all familiar with. Our custom in closing out our goods at the end of each season insures freshness and newness of styles, so that the goods we are now sacrificing are the LATEST and MOST FASHIONABLE that the market affords.

SLANDERERS STRANGERS.

We yesterday printed a letter from a lady who desired to record her protest against the statement made by Whittle, the revivalist, that this coast had been cursed by bad women. The assertion is certainly one which calls for proof, for it is not true, and it is slanderous. What ideas Mr. Whittle has in his mind when he utters this injurious observation we have no means of knowing, but it is a fair presumption that he obtained those ideas from some of the very vicious persons by whom he has been surrounded since he came to California, for he certainly can possess no knowledge of his own on the subject. It is indeed worth recording that the revival movement which has been going on of late in this city has been associated with quite a general attack upon the mental and moral qualities of the people of California. First Mr. Brier declared that Californians were too ignorant and stupid to be intellectual skeptics, and then Mr. Whittle flung an insult into the faces of all the women of the Pacific coast. This is a novel mode of winning popular confidence and recommending the gospel to the community, and it deserves to be inquired into. What did Mr. Whittle mean when he said that this coast had been cursed by bad women? Who are the bad women to whom he referred, and how, when and where have they "cursed" the coast? In the early times there were few or no women here at all. In the days of the gold fever there were no doubt some female adventurers in California, and there have always been perhaps as many abandoned women as can be found in other parts of the world. But if Mr. Whittle meant to say that there were at this present time, or had been for twenty years past, more bad women on the Pacific coast than are to be found on the Atlantic coast, he has foolishly aspersed us, and he ought to make an apology as public as his insult.

The probability is that this man has come here full of the foolish lies which ignorant people in the Eastern States are in the habit of fabricating about California. It is unfortunately true that a large proportion of our Eastern friends believe that all Californians wear red shirts, tuck their pantaloons into their boots, and carry a couple of myriads of revolvers, and demand a "man for break" "fast" every morning of their lives. It is possible that to make the picture thoroughly harmonious our women are supposed to be mostly female gamblers and the mistresses or wives of highwaymen and "cow-boys," and that the feminine sentiment favors powerful cocktails, profane slang, horse-riding in the Sandwich Island fashion, shooting-matches on Sunday mornings, and balls on Sunday evenings. This probably is the kind of picture of California which Mr. Whittle painted for himself, and we can only hope, for the credit of his associates here, that he did not obtain any of his false and slanderous notions from them. Even if this be the explanation of his misrepresentations, however, it cannot be regarded as excusing him. For a man in his position is peculiarly bound to speak the truth, and to avoid false statements of all kinds, and it is very certain that he might have ascertained by a little inquiry what he did.

And it will naturally suggest itself to the reflecting mind that a person whose statements of matters of fact are so utterly untrustworthy can scarcely be the recipient of implicit confidence in regard to deeper and more difficult questions. A man so prone to make loose and erroneous assertions even respecting matters which he could ascertain the truth concerning easily, may be suspected of jumping to conclusions with equal haste and bad judgment in other particulars. A man, too, who professes to be an exponent of Christian doctrine, and who has at the very outset of his missionary work committed so gross and flagrant a violation of that doctrine as expounded by St. Paul in the thirteenth chapter of Corinthians, stands discredited as a teacher and guide. It seems to have struck him as of little account that he should fatten a wicked and base libel upon the women of the Pacific coast, so long as the perpetration of this calumny furnished an excuse or palliation for the fruitlessness of the labors of his kind. It is indeed not uncommon for those who preach doctrines against which the sense of the public is beginning to rebel, to account to themselves for their failure by impeaching the intelligence or the morals of the community. It is not unusual, but it has never yet been productive of fortunate results for the cause so sought to be assisted.

The women of California are in all respects the peers of any women within the sphere of Mr. Whittle's acquaintance, but they are perhaps less inclined to take everything on trust. The intellectual atmosphere of this coast is stimulating, and men as well as women are set upon inquiry in regard to many things which their phlegmatic sisters at the East accept without thinking. It is possible that this tendency, which is no doubt embarrassing to those who have propositions to offer to which will not bear examination, may have offended Mr. Whittle and some of his reverend friends. But this could not give him the right to libel all our women as he has done, and in fact nothing can justify such sweeping and injurious language as he employed. Assuredly it is not by such methods that the people of California can be persuaded into accepting the hysterical sensationalism of traveling revivalists as the last word on religion. The only result of such unworthy aspersions can be to stiffen unbelief, and to disgust even those who have been professors of Christianity previously. Mr. Whittle in short has made a very serious mistake in this matter.

A TYPICAL CASE.

The case of Neary, who is charged with deserting his wife and family and eloping with another woman, is in some respects sufficiently typical to afford a useful illustration. It appears that this man is a skillful mechanic, and that he has always been able to command work at good wages. He had a wife and five children, and it was his duty, and should have been his chief pleasure also, to provide for them, and to play the part of a sober and industrious citizen. But he became infected with the disease called Kearneyism. He frequented the San Francisco ward clubs, and found that he could talk freely, and that his style of talking pleased his associates. Then he was seized with political ambition. Doubtless he believed that he was fitted for some high office. Probably he looked forward to elevation at the hands of the working-men. He became a San Diego crank, neglected his work, his wife, and his children. They were forced to take refuge in a mean and miserable hovel on the tidemark at Oakland. There he retreated
